Lanzarote still popular with the 'un masses'

With guests experiencing temperatures of over 40 degrees at our Matagorda apartment this week, the weather in Lanzarote is maintaining a supernova high for holidaymakers.

Relax in the shade if needs be, but do take time to sample the other delights of the island on your visit. What are they and will they appeal to you?

If high-rise apartment blocks, towering hotels with mass-tourism and an over-commercialised environment is what you expect when you go on holiday—then please give Lanzarote a miss!

Known as the 'jewel' of the Canaries, Lanzarote thankfully still retains much of the cultural and authentic aspects of a Spanish way of life. You definitely won't be faced with the rafts of ugly concrete jungles of high-rise hotels.

With a very spacious feel to the island, the reality is; lots of little white painted one-story houses, unique volcanic scenery, over ninety beautiful beaches and picturesque mountain and sea views from wherever you are on the island. Quaint little Spanish-style towns and villages with cobbled streets coupled with a slow pace of life will help you relax. You will be spoilt for choice in the main resorts with a wide selection of good international restaurants.

Spanish tapas bars are plentiful as are Spanish shops selling authentic locally produced goods. Visitors can also seek out the more exclusive branded goods in the duty free top designer stores such as Versace, Ralph Lauren and Boss.

This small canary island called Lanzarote has long been a hot favourite to those from UK, Ireland, Italy, Spain, Germany and Scandinavia thanks to all of these attractions and more.

The excellent all-year round sunny climate makes Lanzarote a hot, hot, hot destination for discerning holiday makers that want to genuinely discover that 'un massed' reality and get away from the madding crowd!
